Dear Jeff,

Thanks for returning my call on Tuesday. I have given further thought to our conversation and felt it important that I reconfirm ARAMARK's interest in submitting a bid to Powers Management to provide food, beverages, and merchandise to the Bridgestone Arena in Nashville.

As I shared with you during our call on Tuesday, ARAMARK has been made aware of the details of a proposed new agreement that is being considered which addresses food, beverage and merchandise services for the Bridgestone Arena.

Also as I verbally communicated with you during our call, ARAMARK is prepared to offer enhanced economic terms, a greater capital contribution that the terms represented for these services as presented during the most recent Metropolitan Nashville Sports Authority Meeting. In addition we are also prepared to meet your "point of sales" equipment deadline for the 2011-2012 season and commence operation immediately if necessary or required.

I am prepared to meet with you and other representatives of Powers Management immediately to formally present ARAMARK's proposal for your consideration and evaluation.

I hope that you will reconsider our offer as we understand the timeliness of this matter.

Sincerely,

Dear Michael:

It was great catching up last week. As I said on the phone, I really appreciate your aggressiveness on pursuing our business, but we have more than 2 years left on our DNC agreement. The contract also has renewal options that may be exercised.

I am surprised at your follow up, as other concessionaires told us they couldn't bid on the existing contract once they learned that DNC had at least two seasons left under the current deal. We have been told point blank that they won't interfere with DNC's current contract.

Again, while I appreciate your desire, the remaining two years left on the contract leave us with the exclusive option of talking to DNC about an extension that will allow us to improve our current deal immediately. If we don't enter into a new arrangement with DNC, I do look forward to visiting with you in 2013, as we approach the end of this deal, if we were to look beyond Levy and DNC.

Sincerely,

Jeff Cogen
Chief Executive Officer
